01. Advancing Peace Education Through Scholarly and Practical Research

DONOR: Leibniz Institute for Educational Media GRANT SIZE: $10,000 to $100,000

The Grants For Global team is excited to highlight an immersive residential opportunity designed to support dedicated professionals and scholars who are actively shaping the future of peace education. Hosted at a prominent research institute in Germany, this semi-annual initiative invites accomplished practitioners and academics to immerse themselves in focused investigation surrounding educational media, curricula, and conflict transformation. Participants spend several months examining how learning materials can either perpetuate historical inequities or serve as powerful tools for reconciliation, particularly at the secondary school level. Selected participants gain access to extensive specialized libraries, cutting-edge digital media labs, and personalized mentoring from leading experts in the field. Furthermore, the program provides comprehensive logistical and financial backing, including coverage for international travel, monthly living support, and assistance with publication and open-access dissemination. To qualify, candidates must demonstrate a strong professional background or hold a doctorate in relevant disciplines such as the humanities, political science, or social sciences. This opportunity is ideally suited for dedicated 'pracademics' who successfully bridge rigorous academic inquiry with grassroots peacebuilding and hands-on community impact.

02. Empowering Youth Voices in Global Human Rights and Peace Initiatives

DONOR: Normandy Region

Our editorial team is pleased to share a unique global engagement initiative that places human rights and freedom directly into the hands of the next generation. Drawing inspiration from historical milestones of international solidarity, this program empowers young people worldwide to recognize and honor courageous individuals and grassroots entities fighting for justice. The multi-stage initiative is structured specifically for adolescents and young adults, encouraging them to research and nominate inspiring figures whose dedication to peace deserves international acclaim. Throughout the school year, a diverse international youth jury reviews submissions to narrow down the top nominees before a worldwide digital ballot determines the ultimate laureate. By participating, youth not only deepen their understanding of global civic responsibilities but also gain a powerful platform to amplify marginalized voices and champion universal freedoms. This educational journey fosters cross-cultural dialogue, critical thinking, and active global citizenship among schools and youth groups across continents. We encourage educators, youth leaders, and young advocates between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five to engage with this inspiring opportunity to celebrate modern defenders of liberty.

03. Catalyzing Youth-Led Peacebuilding and Social Justice Movements

DONOR: PeaceJam Foundation GRANT SIZE: $1000 to $10,000

We are thrilled to bring our readers' attention to a transformative, yearlong fellowship tailored specifically for young social changemakers who are actively addressing critical issues in their communities. This immersive program connects an international cohort of emerging leaders with world-renowned mentors, including Nobel Laureates, to refine their leadership capabilities across a range of vital competencies. Fellows receive comprehensive training in compassionate leadership, inclusive community building, global citizenship, and effective change agent strategies through structured virtual sessions and global networking events. In addition to expert guidance, participants secure direct financial investment to expand the operational reach and tangible impact of their grassroots projects, emerging nonprofits, or mission-driven enterprises. The initiative is open to motivated young adults who are already spearheading initiatives focused on equity, justice, peace, and systemic social transformation. By blending peer collaboration, professional development, and project investment, this fellowship equips rising changemakers with the tools necessary to build sustainable, long-term solutions for their local communities.

04. Connecting Local Classrooms to Global Issues Through Student Writing

DONOR: Pulitzer Center GRANT SIZE: Less than $1000

Our team at Grants For Global is delighted to spotlight an engaging international writing initiative that empowers students to practice active citizenship by addressing pressing worldwide challenges. The contest challenges young learners in elementary through high school to investigate critical transnational themes—ranging from environmental sustainability and public health to human rights, technological ethics, and conflict resolution—using credible journalistic resources. Participants craft persuasive letters directed at local decision-makers, thoughtfully analyzing how international phenomena directly impact their immediate communities and proposing actionable, evidence-backed solutions. Winners and finalists receive financial support dedicated to enhancing classroom global engagement, alongside the prestigious opportunity to have their perspectives published on an international platform. Additionally, all entrants are invited to participate in a vibrant virtual town hall event to exchange ideas and collaborate with peers from around the world. Educators and students can leverage a wealth of provided instructional guides, workshops, and rubrics to seamlessly integrate this meaningful civic writing exercise into their curricula.

05. Interdisciplinary Residential Fellowships for Advanced Scholars and Artists

The Grants For Global editorial department is proud to present a prestigious academic year opportunity that offers researchers, writers, public intellectuals, and creative artists an inspiring environment to pursue ambitious scholarly and artistic projects. Situated within a renowned institutional network at Harvard University, fellows benefit from robust interdisciplinary dialogue, extensive research collections, and substantial financial backing to support their year of focused inquiry. While the program welcomes diverse perspectives across the humanities, sciences, social sciences, and creative arts, it places a distinct emphasis on vital contemporary themes such as academic freedom, bridging societal divides, gender studies, and addressing political polarization. Applicants must meet rigorous, discipline-specific professional milestones, such as holding terminal degrees with established publication records for researchers, or demonstrating a significant, recognized body of work for artists, journalists, and authors. Selected individuals spend an entire academic year away from routine teaching and administrative duties to concentrate fully on groundbreaking research, artistic creation, and transformative public discourse. This fellowship represents a premier avenue for thought leaders aiming to challenge conventional academic boundaries and contribute enduring insights to their respective fields.

06. Supporting Socially Engaged Art and Community Collaboration Projects

This open call supports artists and creative organizations implementing pioneering projects that utilize art to reconstruct human relationships and foster sustainable, inclusive cultural development within Japan. Applicants can choose between a themed track focused on war, peace, and spiritual resilience in times of conflict, or a flexible open track addressing other critical social issues through creative expression. The initiative prioritizes newly initiated projects that engage local populations through participatory processes rather than traditional, isolated exhibitions or previously displayed works. Successful applicants receive financial support to help bring their innovative community-centered concepts to life over the course of the project year. This grant offers a vital platform for creative practitioners eager to leverage the transformative power of socially engaged art as a catalyst for meaningful, grassroots social change.

07. Empowering Global Scholarship: The Afghanistan Research Initiative Project Grants

DONOR: University of Central Asia GRANT SIZE: $10,000 to $100,000

Our editorial team is closely following this open call designed to empower advanced academic investigators worldwide who are committed to generating original knowledge that supports Afghanistan's future development trajectory. Eligible applicants must hold a doctoral degree and maintain a formal affiliation with a recognized academic or research institution across any global jurisdiction, though principal investigators must operate from outside Afghanistan during the project lifecycle. Proposals are welcomed across an exceptionally broad spectrum of critical themes, ranging from economic resilience, private sector growth, and labor markets to climate adaptation, natural resource management, public administration, gender inclusion, health, and historical preservation. Successful teams receive a twelve-month financial package disbursed incrementally according to verified milestones and approved research deliverables. Furthermore, the initiative places a heavy strategic emphasis on collaborative frameworks that meaningfully connect researchers based inside Afghanistan with international counterparts to foster deep knowledge exchange. To be considered for the upcoming autumn deadline, candidates must submit a comprehensive digital application package complete with a detailed project proposal, workplan, specialized budget forms, and curriculum vitae.

08. Advancing Scholarly Dialogue: Non-Resident Research Fellowships for Afghanistan's Future

DONOR: University of Central Asia GRANT SIZE: $10,000 to $100,000

The program invites PhD holders globally—provided they are anchored to an accredited university or research body and based outside Afghanistan—to undertake sustained inquiry into critical socio-economic, environmental, and political topics. Beyond producing a peer-reviewed journal article, fellows actively contribute to the intellectual community by hosting thematic roundtables, authoring accessible knowledge briefs, and participating in public engagement initiatives over an eighteen-month engagement window. Financial support is distributed across scheduled installments tied directly to satisfactory progress reports and the completion of core fellowship obligations. The initiative strongly encourages cross-border intellectual partnerships that bridge the Afghan diaspora and international scholars. Interested applicants must prepare a rigorous submission package including a concise research blueprint, institutional proof of affiliation, professional writing samples, and standard budgetary documentation prior to the early October deadline.

09. Strengthening Civil Society Resilience: The zivik Crisis Prevention and Peacebuilding Programme

DONOR: Institute for Foreign Cultural Relations GRANT SIZE: $100,000 to $500,000

Civil society organizations navigating complex crisis zones and fragile political landscapes can leverage this established funding mechanism to bolster local capacities for peace, democracy, and stability. Managed to complement official state-led efforts, the programme provides critical financial resources, strategic advice, professional networking, and project evaluation support to non-governmental actors tackling active conflicts. Priority regions for project implementation include Sub-Saharan Africa, the SWANA region, Southeastern Europe, Ukraine, Belarus, the South Caucasus, and specific networks in Latin America and the Caribbean, though exceptional interventions elsewhere may qualify. A major thematic focus centers on the United Nations framework concerning youth, peace, and security, specifically addressing youth political participation, protection from violence, educational conflict prevention, civil society partnerships, and the reintegration of young people emerging from armed groups. State-registered NGOs and local grassroots entities are encouraged to formulate robust proposals that do not exceed the upper limit for financial requests while directly addressing stabilization and democratic consolidation in vulnerable areas.

10. Bridging Science and Security: NATO Science for Peace and Security Joint Collaborations

DONOR: NATO Science for Peace and Security Programme

Scientific innovators and technical experts looking to address pressing international security threats can now apply for collaborative grants and specialized event funding through this defense-oriented research partnership. The programme acts as a catalyst for joint intellectual endeavors between participants from NATO member nations and eligible partner countries, ensuring that resulting solutions directly support broader strategic defense objectives. Eligible formats include multi-year scientific projects alongside high-level events such as advanced research workshops, specialized training courses, and study institutes focused on cutting-edge security domains. Core priority areas encompass non-kinetic defense measures, critical infrastructure resilience in maritime and undersea environments, hybrid tactic countermeasures, advanced energy distribution, biotechnology integrated with artificial intelligence, and secure space technologies. Every participating consortium must be co-directed by qualified personnel from both a NATO member state and an approved partner nation, ensuring that all contributors are officially employed by non-profit academic, governmental, or research institutions rather than commercial for-profit enterprises.

11. Bando Balcani: Fostering Democratic Stability and Human Rights in the Western Balkans

DONOR: Italian Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation GRANT SIZE: $10,000 to $100,000

Private entities and civil society actors dedicated to regional reconciliation and democratic institution-building can access targeted public-private partnership grants aimed at the Western Balkans through this Italian Ministry of Foreign Affairs initiative. The call seeks to enhance the impact of international foreign policy by supporting impactful bilateral or regional initiatives executed directly within Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Kosovo, North Macedonia, Montenegro, or Serbia. Eligible projects must address crucial focal points such as anti-corruption reforms, the rule of law, anti-terrorism measures, the empowerment of marginalized groups including youth and women, and the broader promotion of human rights and international humanitarian law. Selected implementers receive partial cost coverage capped at a specific ceiling for projects lasting up to twelve months, with operational activities required to commence before the close of the calendar year. Administrative expenses are strictly capped as a minor percentage of the total budget to ensure maximum direct impact on the ground across the targeted region.

12. Honoring Courage: Global Recognition Awards for Human Rights Defenders in Crisis Zones

DONOR: Geneva Centre for Human Rights Advancement and Global Dialogue GRANT SIZE: $1000 to $10,000

Human rights advocates, grassroots networks, and courageous individuals operating under extreme duress in the world's most volatile environments are invited to seek international recognition through this prestigious global awards program. The initiative specifically highlights frontline defenders working tirelessly to protect human dignity, document violations, and secure justice in severe conflict zones such as Gaza, Sudan, Ukraine, Myanmar, Yemen, and the Democratic Republic of the Congo. The awards program features multiple distinct categories encompassing armed conflict protection, accountability documentation, and community resilience, alongside an honorary non-monetary humanitarian response distinction. Beyond public financial prizes awarded in specific categories, victors gain invaluable institutional exposure through prominent advocacy networks and international platforms, significantly amplifying the reach of their vital localized missions. Nominations remain open globally for any qualifying entity, network, or self-nominated practitioner, provided submissions include robust evidentiary documentation, detailed statements of achievement, and professional references.

13. Empowering Civil Society in Burundi for Peacebuilding and Gender Equality

DONOR: Women's Peace and Humanitarian Action Fund (WPHF) GRANT SIZE: $100,000 to $500,000

Our editorial team at Grants For Global is pleased to highlight this valuable opportunity for civil society organizations operating within Burundi to secure vital support for their peacebuilding and gender equality initiatives. This program focuses heavily on conflict prevention, local resolution efforts, and advancing the inclusion and economic empowerment of women and girls in vulnerable contexts. Eligible groups can choose between institutional financing to strengthen their internal operational capacities or programmatic funding to execute specific, community-level interventions addressing peace and security. Applicants are expected to carefully navigate the submission guidelines, ensuring they use the correct proposal templates and submit all required documentation, including proof of legal status, exclusively through the designated online portal. To help prospective applicants prepare strong submissions, an informative orientation session is scheduled to take place both in Bujumbura and virtually, accompanied by dedicated channels for clarifying questions ahead of the deadline. By investing in local actors who champion the Women, Peace and Security agenda, this initiative fosters resilient communities and creates sustainable pathways for marginalized populations to participate meaningfully in civic life.

14. Strengthening Communities in Papua New Guinea Through Grassroots Development Support

DONOR: Digicel PNG Foundation

Through our ongoing efforts to map impactful regional funders, Grants For Global brings attention to this dedicated community investment initiative designed to support not-for-profit organizations in Papua New Guinea. The program targets locally driven solutions across critical sectors including education and literacy, holistic health, peace building, and sustainable livelihoods or financial inclusion. Selected organizations benefit not only from direct financial backing but also from structured capacity building and collaborative monitoring and evaluation to maximize long-term impact. The funding structure offers a tiered approach, allowing newer eligible entities to access initial project support while providing larger grants for proven past recipients who demonstrate strong organizational compliance and successful completion of prior initiatives. Applicants must satisfy statutory requirements and prove they serve the majority of people within their target communities through capable and dedicated leadership. This mechanism ensures that resources flow directly to trusted local actors who understand pressing community needs and possess the operational readiness to deliver meaningful, on-the-ground change.

15. Advancing Transatlantic Academic Exchange and Leadership Through French Fellowships

DONOR: Villa Albertine GRANT SIZE: $1000 to $10,000

Our resource desk at Grants For Global is excited to feature a prestigious fellowship opportunity that enables outstanding American students to undertake a transformative year of master's-level study at leading academic institutions in France. Designed to cultivate the next generation of international leaders, the program specifically prioritizes fields such as sustainability, biotechnology, health, security, social equity, and emerging technologies like artificial intelligence. Alongside their rigorous academic coursework, selected fellows participate in an immersive year-long leadership curriculum that includes specialized lectures, masterclasses, institutional site visits, and professional mentorship. The comprehensive support package covers essential living expenses via a monthly stipend, academic tuition at partner institutions, application fee reimbursements, visa fee waivers, and round-robin international travel expenses. Participants also benefit from fully covered travel and activity costs related to the leadership component, though they must manage their separate university admissions concurrently with the fellowship application. This initiative serves as a powerful bridge for academic and cultural immersion, equipping emerging scholars with the European perspective and collaborative networks necessary to strengthen bilateral relations.

16. Synthesizing Research on Evolving Security and Conflict Challenges for Policy Impact

DONOR: Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council GRANT SIZE: $10,000 to $100,000

Grants For Global highlights this timely research mobilization initiative aimed at examining and synthesizing existing knowledge regarding emerging security and conflict dynamics to inform future policy and practice. The program supports academic reviews across diverse topics such as hybrid warfare, cybersecurity, disinformation, climate security, northern sovereignty, supply chain resilience, and whole-of-society preparedness, while strongly welcoming Indigenous-led and Nordic-collaborative approaches. Rather than funding original data collection, the grants enable researchers to assess knowledge strengths and gaps, evaluate existing data, and prepare comprehensive synthesis reports and evidence briefs. Two distinct streams cater to domestic academic researchers and international collaborative teams involving Canadian and Nordic principal investigators. Successful projects must culminate in openly accessible reports, evidence briefs, and active knowledge mobilization endeavors such as conference presentations and stakeholder outreach. Evaluated through a competitive merit review based on methodology, feasibility, and mobilization potential, these awards empower the research community to translate complex data into actionable insights for decision-makers.
